
Summer with You

Shorter summer days are met with daze
Memories of lazy rivers, warm lake waters
Ocean waves crashing, blood flow rushing

Images of the wind blowing through your hair,
Your skin glowing from the sun's glare
Long days had slowed time,
Making every moment with you ever so divine

The irresistible taste of freedom,
Feeling of sand escaping my palms
Star lights on clear, moonless nights
Only surpassed by that of your sight

A six-string melody
Completes the season' symphony
If next summer is even half the fun,
I will surely be in heaven

Once, a Blue Moon

It happens ever so rarely
You meet someone and feel they're the one
And you just know, for you have a glow

But after a phase, you might realize
When your energy doesn't yield synergy
You lose your way recognizing it may only be one-way

A crushing feeling takes hold, truth be told
Closure comes as you regain composure
A connection of cosmic proportions
Can only flourish through effortless magic
