
Foreword

Every poem begins with a moment

Time reveals what the moment could not

Perhaps the greatest unknown has always been ourselves

Memories

They were years to remember,
For they were filled with fun and laughter
Years of growing together,
Discovering, enjoying each other

Sliding in pristine winter snow
Smelling spring flowers, watching our kids grow
Soaking in sun-filled summer days, admiring our glow
With colourful fall behind us, wishing time moved slow

Now at a crossroad where a chapter ends
It will be difficult to say goodbye, dear friend
Though only the joyful memories of season's past remain,
Know that all the love and caring was not in vain

For there's not a bond stronger
Than the love that binds a family together
A picture of us, frozen in time
To keep, forever in our mind
